This page constitutes the Privacy Policy for our mobile applications.

We have developed this Privacy Policy to help you understand how we use the information. We encourage you to read this Privacy Policy carefully so that you can make informed decisions about your use of our mobile applications.

Personal Data

Personal data refers to personally identifiable information that specifically identifies you as an individual (e.g. your name, email address). We do NOT collect, store or use any of your Personal data.

If you contact us by email, then we will use your email address only for the purpose of contacting you. This will be only in response to a communication from you.

User Entered Data

All data entered into the applications by you remains on your device. We never pass this data and we never use it.

Device Data | Non-personal Data

Non-personal data refers to information that, by itself, does not personally identify you. We may collect Non-personal data such as your device model number, operating system version, country code and other properties for purposes of managing the applications.

We use third party analytics service to help anonymously monitor app usage and identify potential issues. This is purely a means to help us improve the applications usability experience.

Google Analytics | Use of non-personal data

Though we don't store and use any personal information our applications may contain APIs from third parties, specifically, our mobile applications can use Google Analytics to help analyse how users behave with our applications. We mainly look out how long users have spent in the applications, how many screens were displayed and the location(Country/Region) of our users. This information is then used to evaluate the use of our applications and to improve the usability.
